

A Brief History

1937

The National Gallery of Art was created for the people of the United States of America in 1937 by a Joint Resolution of Congress, accepting the gift of financier, art collector, and public servant Andrew W. Mellon. His gift included old master paintings and sculptures and a building to house the new museum, to be constructed on the National Mall. On March 17, 1941, President Franklin D. Roosevelt accepted the completed National Gallery of Art on behalf of the American people. Opened to the public on the following day, this grand building, designed by John Russell Pope and now called the West Building, was at the time the largest marble structure in the world.

Andrew W. Mellon's hope that the newly created National Gallery would attract similar gifts of the highest quality from other collectors was soon realized in the form of major donations of European and American art from private donors. These eventually included founding benefactors Samuel H. Kress, Rush H. Kress, Joseph Widener, Chester Dale, Ailsa Mellon Bruce, Lessing J. Rosenwald, and Paul Mellon. This tradition of generosity continues to this day with gifts from hundreds of other donors and artists.

East Building

The East Building is designed to present the Gallery's permanent collection of modern art as well as special exhibitions. The large auditorium and small auditorium are located on the Concourse. The Library, Center for Advanced Study in the Visual Arts, offices, and the study room for European prints and drawings are located in the Administrative and Study Center.

Concourse

The underground Concourse linking the East and West Buildings contains the Cascade Café / Espresso & Gelato Bar and the Gallery Shops.

West Building

European art from the thirteenth through the nineteenth centuries and American art from colonial times to the early twentieth century are on view in the Main Floor galleries. The Ground Floor has galleries for prints, drawings, and photographs; galleries for sculpture, medals, plaquettes, furniture, and decorative arts; three study rooms for American prints and drawings, for photographs, and for medals and plaquettes; the West Building Lecture Hall; the Garden Café; and the Gallery Shops. Special exhibitions are on view in selected galleries of the West Building.

Research Areas

The Study Rooms and the Library are open for research purposes by prior appointment.

Study Rooms

Open Monday - Friday 10:00 am - noon and 2:00 - 4:00 pm. Closed on national holidays. Telephone for appointments:

Sculpture Garden

The Sculpture Garden provides an informal yet elegant setting for modern sculptures. The reflecting pool and fountain at the center of the Sculpture Garden become an ice rink during the winter and the setting for Jazz in the Garden during the summer. Visitors may dine indoors or outdoors at the Pavilion Café. The Sculpture Garden is wheelchair accessible. Visitors with disabilities may require assistance in the Pavilion.

1978

The Gallery’s East Building, located on land set aside in the original Joint Resolution, was conceived to display the Gallery’s collection of modern painting, sculpture, and artists’ prints and drawings and to accommodate exhibitions, an advanced study and research center, staff offices, and an art reference library. The building, designed by I. M. Pei, opened on June 1, 1978, and was accepted for the nation by President Jimmy Carter. Funds for construction were given by Paul Mellon and Ailsa Mellon Bruce, the son and daughter of the Gallery founder, and by the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation.

The Sculpture Garden, providing a distinctive landscaped setting for works from the Gallery’s collection of modern sculpture, opened to the public on May 23, 1999. The Morris and Gwendolyn Cafritz Foundation provided funds for construction and for several of the sculptures.

The 6th Street entrance to the West Building at Constitution Avenue and the 4th Street entrance to the East Building have ramps and are fully wheelchair accessible. Wheelchairs are available on a first-come, first-served basis at the East Building and all West Building entrances.

The galleries and public areas and facilities are accessible by elevator. The Sculpture Garden is fully accessible.

Visitors with vehicles displaying the international symbol of accessibility may park – on a first-come, first-served basis – in limited spaces available on the West Building 4th Street Plaza. See the security officer on duty for further assistance.

The National Gallery enjoys a supportive partnership of public commitment and private philanthropy to fulfill its mission to exhibit, preserve, and interpret great works of European and American art in the nation's collection. Since its founding, federal funds have fostered the protection and care of the nation's art collection and have supported the Gallery's operations and maintenance, ensuring that the Gallery is open 363 days a year, free of charge. Private support has created a renowned collection of European and American works of art, provided funds to construct the two landmark buildings and the Sculpture Garden, and makes possible, in conjunction with federal support, a changing program of special exhibitions.

Assistive listening devices for use in both East Building auditoriums are available at the Information Desk on the Ground Level of the East Building. Listening devices for the West Building Lecture Hall are available at the Information Desk on the Ground Floor of the West Building at the Constitution Avenue entrance.

Sign-language interpreters and CART are available for visitors who are deaf or hard of hearing. Guides for visitors who are blind or have low vision are available for tours of the permanent collection as well as special exhibitions with three weeks' notice. Printed scripts of all recorded tours are available, and large-print brochures are available for some of the special exhibitions. Special headphones, which deliver full-frequency digital audio sound, are also available free of charge. Films shown in conjunction with special exhibitions are closed captioned.

For further information, see the Gallery's website at www.nga.gov or call 202-842-6179, Monday through Friday between 10:00 am and 5:00 pm.
